DESPAIR

I find myself in a pool of tears, In a subtle state of despair.
I find myself in a desert, With a fear of sand.
I find myself in rain, Drenched, longing warmth.
I find myself in a storm, With a chaos within myself.
I find myself in silence, With a screaming heart beating in me.
I find myself in an utter darkness, Craving a single ray of sunlight.
I find myself fighting for someone, Someone I can't have.
I find myself looking at the mirror,
Trying to find the kid within but the reflection I see feels distant.
I find myself in time, Moments slipping like sand,
the harder I hold, the faster I lose.
I find myself in wind, Tossed from shore to shore with no anchor.
I find myself in a void, With a bigger void within me.
I find myself shattered yet again, Too broken to be mended again.
I find myself in light, Waiting for it to fade to dwell in shadows tonight.
I find myself in scream, But no one seems to hear me grieve.
I find myself drowning, With no hands reaching.
I find myself fighting, shielding him, Yet he joins them, striking me.
I am lost in this war, bruised by your blows,
Still I crave those hands that pushed me away, needing them to caress me. I speak your defence with a trembling heart,
While the thought of your words tear me apart. I fight and fight to keep you mine,
Yet you plan to cut me off your life. I find myself calling out your name,
I see you turn your back, shattering me with your silent stares.
I find myself in a forest,
Lost in the winds of doubt.
I find myself in a maze, Lost between paths of belief.
I find myself in a fog, Hoping for it to shield me from my worries.
I find myself on the edge, Hoping for someone to push me.
I find myself in fire, Hoping it's warmth to consume me.
I find myself at the door of death, Hoping for someone to set me free.
I find myself in the cold, Desiring the numbness to take over.
I wish that I can't be found anymore.

WHO'S WHO? BUT THAT'S NOT YOU

Standing in front of my life,
made me realise,

A lot of things are on hold,
make the move and be bold,

You have lived, a life carrying fears,
And, oh! precious is your tears,

You have people from the wide ranges,
but at the end they changes,

What is yours will never be yours,
what was lost was never yours.

When the time heals,
It's time your heart gets seals,

People will not trust your truth because they didn't understood,

As, my dear they have a blindfold that always misunderstood

UNIVERSITY DREAM

Within these walls of stone and light,
We chase our dreams, take fearless flight.
Books and lectures, wisdom's call,
A place where knowledge touches all.

The sleepless nights, the coffee spills,
The silent halls, the midnight thrills.
Deadlines loom and pages turn,
Yet through it all, we rise and learn.

Friendships forged in fleeting days,
Echoed laughter, endless praise.
Debates that spark like fiery streams,
Fueling minds with boundless dreams.

From freshman fears to senior grace,
Each step, a mark, a time, a place.
Through trials, triumphs, highs, and lows,
The university spirit grows.

So here we stand, with hearts so free,
A future bright, a legacy.
For though we leave, we'll still belong -
In memories, in minds, in song.

ECHOES OF YESTERDAY

Soft as a whisper, light as the air,
Memories linger, floating with care.
Shadows of laughter, echoes of tears,
Carved in the heart through all of the years.

Golden-lit summers, winters of white,
Flicker like lanterns deep in the night.
Footsteps on shorelines washed by the tide,
Moments that stay, though time slips outside.

Faces once near, now faded yet bright,
Dancing like stars in the hush of the night.
Songs we once sang, words left unsaid,
Still find their way through dreams in my head.

Though time may steal, it cannot erase,
The love, the warmth, the touch of a place.
For memories live where hearts still remain,
Forever a spark in joy and in pain.

SKYBORNE SYMPHONY

At dawn's first blush, the blackbird sings,
A melody on golden wings.
The robin hums a tune so bright,
A chorus born of morning light.

The lark ascends with endless cheer,
Its song so pure, so crisp, so clear.
A sparrow flits from branch to bough,
A tiny king with feathered crown.

The eagle rides the rising air,
A sovereign gaze, a hunter's stare.
The swallow spins in loops and sways,
Like rippling waves on summer days.
The heron stands in waters still,
A patient ghost with sharpened will.

The cuckoo calls from distant shade,
A voice that drifts, then starts to fade.
The raven speaks in solemn cries,
A shadow cast on silver skies.
The owl waits till dark to fly,
A silent watcher, sharp of eye.

THE HEART OF THE GAME

On fields of green and courts so wide,
Where passion runs and dreams collide,
We push, we strive, we rise, we fall,
Yet stand again and give our all.

The whistle blows, the game is set,
A test of skill, no room for regret.
The roaring crowd, the pounding heart,
A moment's edge, a brand-new start.

Through sweat and pain, through loss and gain,
We fight, we rise, we break the chain.
Not just for glory, nor for fame,
But for the love—the love of the game.

Teamwork binds, like fire, like steel,
A common goal, a shared ideal.
Through highs and lows, we stand as one,
Until the final race is run.

So play with heart, play strong, play true,
For every game shapes more of you.
Not just a sport, not just a name,
But life itself - the heart of the game.
